The holiday season is a time to be thankful for good health, positive relationships, as well as personal and professional success throughout the year.

It is around this time of year that we recognize that we owe our success to the loyalty of our clients as well as the hard work of our staff and vendors. We are thankful to those clients who have partnered with us and the opportunities to serve them.

This is also the opportunity for us to look back and reflect on this past year. We ask ourselves "Did our company live up to its values?" In a company like BSI whose mission is to provide quality data management and biostatistical services, we are always mindful of data and analytical integrity. For example, do the results of our work represent what has been observed or measured?

With this same rigor it is also important to look at the integrity of HOW we do our work. Did we interact with our colleagues and clients according to the value system of the company? Did we take responsibility for the quality of our work, treat everyone with respect, and 'go that extra mile' for others?

These questions are embodied in a list of value statements for our company. Those statements remind us that service is about others and their success and needs. It is our responsibility to clients in addition to our innovation and expertise that makes BSI successful. We would like to share these statements with you. We look forward to another successful year as we find more opportunities to serve and collaborate.
